Elk Point area votes "No"

Voters in the Beaver River Constituency voted overwhelmingly Monday to reject the Charlottetown accord.

The accord was rejected by 70 per cent of the voters in the Beaver River Riding. Voters in St. Paul were not as adamantly opposed to the accord. The vote in Elk Point was 218 opposed in 767 voted to accept it.

The Saddle Lake Reserve have requested not to have a polling station on the reservation. However, residents in Saddle Lake could vote at the St. Brides polling station.

The feeling of voters in North East Alberta appeared to be consistent with those of their counterparts in other parts of the province.

Sixty-two per cent of Albertans voted to reject the Charlottetown accord. The Beaver River constituency is the riding of Reform Party M.P. Deborah Grey. Grey has been campaigning vigorously across the country for Canadians to reject the Charlottetown accord.

Alberta was one of seven provinces to vote no on the referendum. Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick voted to accept the accord.

There was an approximate 75 per cent voted turnout in Beaver River according to electoral officer Eugene Chaba.

There were 31,032 ballots cast in the Beaver River constituency.

Results were not official when the St. Paul Journal went to press.

Harbingers Of Halloween

This smiling scarecrow and his 'scaredog' are surrounded by harvest produce as they wait to greet Halloween trick-or-treaters at the home of Rick and Brenda Patroch. Motorists are reminded that the little ghouls and ghosties will be out in full force from 4 to 7 p.m. on Saturday, so take care!

Small Business winners named

It's Small Business Week, and the Elk Point Chamber of Commerce is proud to announce that Ron and Sharon Smith of Home Town Grocers (formerly Reddi Mart) are their 1992 Small Business Persons of the Year. A total of eight nominations were received by the Chamber, naming seven local businesses. President Millie Orr is very pleased with the response and the glowing comments in the nominations, which she feels shows that our local businesses are doing their best to please the public. "It's encouraging to have this large a response to our request for nominations."

Small businesses throughout the area will benefit from the promotional campaign now underway by St. Paul - o Smoky Lake Community Futures, which was outlined at the Chamber meeting by local delegate Vern King. The campaign, which is broadcast on LW Radio, encourages home town shopping, which King views as a "positive direction."

Home town shopping in Elk

Point will be enhanced with an interest free shopping loan program again this Christmas, through the Alberta Treasury Branch. Local merchants will again be invited to sign up to be part of the program. Watch for further details in advertising sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

A recent rash of NSF cheques in Elk Point prompted the Chamber to invite RCMP Cst. Al Stockley to last Wednesday's meeting. He outlined the process of going through Small Claims Court to get restitution for the cheques, and told the Chamber how the RCMP can help by prosecuting issuers of these cheques. The Chamber had also invited the Crown Prosecutor, an expert on civil law, to attend the meeting, but she had previous commitments, and will be invited to come to a later meeting. Reviving the Chamber's earlier fan-out system has been suggested as a way to curb the numbers of NSF cheques in Elk Point.

Travelling merchants are still of concern to the Chamber, and President Orr reminded the members and the community at large that they should ask these vendors for their Town of Elk Point business licence before purchasing anything from them.

It was reported that both the Chamber forum for Town election candidates and the Referendum question and answer session with MP Deborah Grey were well attended.

Referendum "No solution"

With six days to go before the Referendum, Beaver River MP Deborah Grey told an audience of half a hundred Elk Point area residents that she felt a 'yes' outcome "would not solve Canada's problems," but rather would "take us down the path to Canada being further divided." At least fifty clauses in the draft document would require further discussion, she said.

Grey went through the document with her audience, noting various clauses she questioned. She disagreed

President Orr, who was unsuccessful for her bid in Ward 2 of the Hospital Board election, is still worried that the Elk Point Hospital could be changed from an acute care facility to a nursing home. "Get after your board member and make sure this doesn't happen," she urged.

Community Services Director Terri Ehlert told the Chamber that November is Family Violence Prevention Month, and that plans for the month include a presentation by the Azimuth Theatre on November 21, and an 8 page insert in both the St. Paul Journal and the Elk Point Review, in order to bring awareness and education regarding family violence to the community.

with the financial experts "who say the sky will fall," and pointed out that "Joe Clark said the same about Meech Lake," but in that case, the stock market levelled out after a three week drop.

"I do give Don Getty credit" for his work on the Triple E Senate, Grey said. "He opened the door-but it's one and a half Es, if that." She feels there is "something token and pitiful" about the idea of half men and half women, and wondered what group would be next to have equality, joking that it could be half left handed people like herself, and half right handed.

She did not agree that a 'no' vote would be saying "Quebec, go away," and felt that Separatism "would not go away if 95 percent said yes." She said it will be up to Quebec to make their own decision, and no one can make it for them.

She cautioned her audience that "things in this document will effect Canada for years to come" and declared that it is "worth our time and energy to make the best thing we can out of Canada."

Once in a blue moon entertainment

It only happens once in a blue moon. We're talking about the F. G. Miller Fine Arts Council's evening of entertainment that's coming up November 10, under the title of "Once In A Blue Moon."

Last year's very successful fine arts night took place during the Christmas season, and although crowds at all three performances were good, the Council has decided to move to a less crowded time on the social calendar, and to spread three nights of enjoyment over the year, with performances in November, January and later in the spring.

The November 10 event will feature a performance by the Elk Point and District

Choral Society, entertainment by the Debbie Lawrence Trio, and much more, possibly including a short dramatic presentation. A lot of community interest has been shown in taking part in the evening, according to Council member Leonard Franko, who added that the event relies entirely on volunteer entertainers. This allows the public to enjoy the performance for only $1.

A preliminary word about the January show is that it will focus on drama.

Watch for further details in next week's edition.

Still tax dollars

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the article "Community facility plans still on hold," in the October 6, 1992 edition of the Elk Point Review.

Apparently the Community and Cultural Centre Building Society has a mandate to raise all the money necessary for the building proposed. I am glad Town tax dollars will not be used to build this expensive building; however my provincial and federal tax dollars are going to be used to build it, if the society gets the grants applied for. In effect, my taxes will go up because of this project and others like it, even if Ton tax dollars are not used. Supposing provincial and federal grants are approved to build the building, there will still be upkeep (utilities, grounds, repairs, etc.) to pay for. My provincial and federal tax dollars will be used again to pay for the upkeep. I cannot fool myself into believing anything else, as there are no community centre buildings in Alberta that are self supporting. I personally cannot afford to pay for this building with my tax dollars, Town, provincial or federal.

The article also noted that another survey of Town-owned buildings is to take place, to find a temporary home for the Community Services Centre and its programs. I realize the building the Centre is in is almost condemned, and the Services Centre must move. However, several years ago a study was done on the feasibility of building a Cultural Centre, and at that time the Town-owned buildings were surveyed and found to lack the space and facilities to accommodate the Community Services Centre and its programs. What has changed? Why pay to have this study done again?

What about looking at the purchase of one of the empty newer buildings in town? Or have the Community Services Centre rent space from someone other than the Town? Or spread the programs into different buildings already in use in town? There are alternatives available if we would just look for them. Repeating a study, that basically found the Town-owned property was unsuitable for housing the Community Services Centre, is not a move forward; it is repeating work already done and paid for.

I am glad that our community has put the plans for building a $1.4 million Community and Cultural Centre on hold. I think the plans should stay in limbo until some viable options have been seriously looked into, instead of overlooked and regretted.

Sincerely,

Juanita Joanne Buck

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Our sincere apologies for not making it clear to our readers that the planned survey of available space would in fact be done by Town staff and would not incur any additional cost.)

What's Happening At COMMUNITY SERVICES

1. Be realistic - learn to separate the possible from the impossible.
 2. Keep your sense of humor. This is a great weapon when fighting stress. Lose that and all is lost.
 3. Try to believe that the bottle is half full rather than half empty. Too many people have a tendency for "catastrophizing and awfulizing."
 4. Avoid negative people - surround yourself with "shining stars."
 5. Get a relaxing massage rather than reaching for pills or booze.
 6. Make exercise a religion. Exercise increases endorphins, a morphine-like substance that helps to fight the depression that often accompanies stress.
 7. Learn to live with less. You might just be able to exist without the latest VCR!
 8. Simplify your life. Try to foresee stress producing situations in advance. Never schedule two at the same time!
 9. Accept the fact that perfection is impossible. Rather be satisfied to strive for the best.
 10. Use "bitch sessions" for relief and take a break from stressful situations whenever possible.
 11. Laugh - rent a funny movie, tell a joke, learn to "wear the world like a loose garment."
 12. Remember that life without stress is death. The secret is to develop a healthy response to stress.

WALKING--ACTIVITY OF A LIFETIME

There are almost as many reasons to walk as there are people to walk. People walk or "wheel" for pleasure; some walk to get fit or stay in shape. Others walk to take a break during a hectic day. Families explore the outdoors by walking together. Some people use walking as therapy for injured muscles or troubled feelings. People walk or wheel to explore, find adventure or get from here to there. And some Canadians walk for companionship and good times. The more you walk or wheel, the more reasons you'll find to make walking a part of your daily routine.

The journey to health and fitness begins with active living - moving a little more, a little more often, every day. It's easy to take the first step:

- Walk part-way or all the way home from work or school.
- Walk to the store or on other errands.
- Push a stroller or wheel your wheelchair.
- Walk the stairs, instead of using an elevator or escalator.
- Invite a family member or friend to walk with you.
- Walk a block at break time or lunch time.

- Take an after-dinner stroll with your partner.

- Walk a dog (borrow your neighbor's if you don't have one).

Watch next week for more about the benefits of walking.

THE THEATRE IS COMING TO TOWN!

November is Family Violence Prevention Month. Elk

Tips for handling stress

Point Community Services and the Town and County of St. Paul FCSS programs have jointly planned to host a number of activities to highlight an awareness of family violence.

One project is to bring the Azimuth Theatre award winning drama "Under Broken Wings (Revised)" to Elk Point on Monday, November 23. "Under Broken Wings" is a research based drama about family violence. There are a series of short plays and original music which explore the cycle of violence as it relates to child, sibling, dating, spousal and elder abuse. The play is followed by a panel discussion by local family violence resource agency representatives. The play is suitable for teens and adults. Be sure to mark Monday, November 23 on your calendar for an evening at the Theatre! Call Community Services at 724-3800 for more information.

Editorial

The day after

"When the tumult and the shouting dies, And the captains and the kings depart..." A couple of lines from a long-ago learned, and then forgotten, poem. They were impressive, to remain in my mind for three score years and a bit.

The elections furor, but more, the Referendum debates have brought these lines to mind; what a lot of unusual things have been said in the past few weeks! Exaggeration, threats, fear, outright lies, semi-lies, mud-slinging, back-biting, heckling, and interspersed, a good deal of truth. We are all afraid, to some extent, of the unknown - and the future is always unknown. We can predict, guess, hope, dream, assume - I even think of what will come on the morrow. We do not really know until it gets here.

No tomorrow is completely known. We can predict, guess, fortell, dream, forecast, prophesy, foresee, devine, anticipate, envision, presage, and read the writing on the wall; but we still do not entirely know what will come tomorrow.

Varioulsy, we can face the tomorrows of life with fear, dread and despair, or we can face them with hope, courage and open arms. I much prefer the latter.

Why should we look at a new day with a frown on our face and worry in our hearts? It will look no better or worse if we greet it cheerfully and hopefully, than if we meet the future with groans and moans and dread. It is, moreover, a lot lighter burden to carry and doesn't cause so many wrinkles.

Today, as I write this, I've no idea how the Referendum will turn out. Will Canadians say it yea or nay. But I do know that life will go on, whichever way it will be, and that we are a tough, bounce-back conglomerate; we have survived any number of setbacks, in the century-plus while we've been a country, and we'll survive this one - however it goes.

I have given myself a chuckle, looking up the word conglomerate, to be sure I used it correctly, this is part of the definition: (4) "composed of miscellaneous matter adhering together." Now, doesn't that describe Canada deliciously? Below that is conglomeration: n. - "act or result of conglomerating; (2) mixed collection, hodgepodge."

I feel that describes Canadians precisely. We are indeed a hodgepodge, a mix of many different peoples, none of us more equal than any other.

Everyone knows a mixture is better than that one thing alone. What kind of a cake would you get if you put only sugar in it? Or baking powder? Ask any rancher - he will tell you that cross-breeding gives tougher, more durable stock.

So if we mix our knowledge, our expertise, our (God help us!) culture together, we should turn out much stronger, wiser, more durable than any one of us in the 'pure' state could ever be.

I love Canada. I think that we have the whole world in our hands. All we have to do is recognize that, and start (or continue) to make the best of it.

I challenge whoever "loses" in this Referendum to put that aside, pick up their life and go on with it. To forget the nit-picking, the insults, the stick-

Alberta Trails

By Irene Magnusson

in-the-mud doldrums, and to get up on their feet and face the world with a grin. If you only sit and cry, you will run the oceans full - and we do have enough salt water as it is.

Another bit from another poem - or perhaps from the same one - came to me: "Lo, all their pomp of yesterday, is one with Nineveh and Tyre..." I looked up those two words, too. Nineveh was a city over in present-day Iraq, which fell to enemy invasion back in 612 B.C., leaving only a few caved-in rock walls for present-day excavators. Tyre (also called Sur) was a going concern back in 1100 B.C., over 3000 years ago, but was overrun, conquered, probably repeatedly, and now is under Israeli rule, no grandeur left.

All of which is to illustrate that we can't take it with us when we go, so we should enjoy it while we are here. "It," in this case, being Canada.

Some of you may be content to spend the rest of your natural lives squabbling over who has what, and how much, instead of enjoying, rejoicing and downright reveling in the glorious country and freedom we have. I'm not so inclined. Every day I live I am happy to be here, and to see the dawn, and the sunsets, the blue sky above and the good earth below. I enjoy my fellow man, too, and couldn't care less what color, gender or ancestry they have. All they have to do is not hit me, be civil, and I'd like it if they tried to look after themselves, too, and not be forever whining and wailing that they have less than their neighbors.

I've heard a remark on rights, that says your right to swing your fist ends just before my nose begins...or an old proverb: do unto others as you would be done by. My mother had a million of them, mostly very true.

"Canada is a solution, looking for a problem." I like that one. Also this one: "O Canada! My home and native land."

Our Past

Steve Andrishak

Halloween night is now a tame affair when compared to the Halloweens of past years. Years ago, it was a night looked forward to by both young and old. You never knew what to expect the morning after Halloween because someone always came up with a new prank which was previously untried. Sometimes it bordered on vandalism, however in most cases the damage done was only minimal.

A trick a the head of everyone's list was to tip someone's outhouse. During the 1930s and 1940s there was no indoor plumbing in Elk Point - every household had an outhouse located somewhere on their lot. It didn't matter how well these outhouses were anchored to the ground, they all suffered the same fate.

During early years, Elk Point was not policed like it is today. Those celebrating Halloween night usually had all the time in the world to do whatever they had in mind, and without interruption.

I recall one Halloween night during the 1930s when a group of grown-up boys dismantled and then re-assembled a farm wagon on the peak of C.J. Markstad's store. It was really something to see the next morning. It was an undertaking that no doubt took most of the night and required a great deal of manpower as well.

Another Halloween incident I recall during the 1930s involved a number of boys who were canvassing the stores for treats. The merchant of one of the stores refused to give the boys any treats, he even chased them out of his store. This didn't go down well with these boys and they decided to get even with this merchant. After considerable planning, one of the boys climbed up on the flat roof of the store with a pail of ice cold water while the others re-entered the store.

Ghosts of Halloween's past

They soon intimidated the merchant and again were chased out. This time the angered merchant followed them out the door and the next thing he knew he had a pail of cold water dumped on his head.

Another Halloween incident I recall happened during the 1960s. It involved a number of teenaged boys and girls who wanted to do something different. They first divided into two groups. The first group deposited four or five chickens into the post office through the parcel chute. Prior to this the other group had turned loose two cats and a small dog through the same chute. In no time the interior of the post office resembled a merry-go-round. The dog chased the two cats and the resulting action excited and disturbed the chickens. They were left alone for well over two hours. Someone passing the post office after midnight heard the racket and notified the postmaster, who quickly made a trip to the post office to investigate the incident. He found the interior of the post office in a mess - the chickens had "fowled" up the mail section in their own little way by postmarking much of the mail with chicken droppings. The postmaster almost had a fit and you really couldn't blame him. The following morning our local town constable, Harry Keck, was called in to investigate the damage done and in no time had a number of scared teenagers rounded up. This incident wasn't taken lightly by the post office officials who were quickly notified. Tampering with His Majesty's Royal Mail was illegal and it was considered a criminal offence. However, after a lengthy investigation,, everything turned out well for the teenagers involved; they were strictly warned, given a good scare and pardoned. The distribution of the mail however was delayed somewhat as it had to be returned to Edmonton for dry cleaning before it could be distributed to the public.

Usually on Halloween, a child's bicycle or wagon always seemed to disappear, never to be seen again. To some it seemed like a good night to acquire a bit of someone else's property without being caught.

The morning after Halloween was always considered to be cleanup day. It was a time to put the old outhouse in place again and a time when all soaped windows as well as other minor damage had to be attended to.

Halloween is no longer celebrated like it was in past years. It seems it lost its 'punch' after running water was introduced to our village. After that, everyone did away with their outhouse and the teenagers soon lost interest in Halloween - after all, tipping toilets was the main attraction and they no longer could find any to tip. Today, very few pranks are pulled off during Halloween night, nothing like it used to be when both young and old looked forward to a night of fun.

Adults.

Have the prettiest gifts under the tree with our Creative Gift Wrapping on November 24 from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Complete several mini crafts in one evening at Variety Night on November 25 from 7 to 9 p.m. Instructors are Susan Thornton, Gloria Zarowny and Verona Lea Flanders, and the projects will include rolled beeswax candles and wheat weaving.

Finish your handcrafted bedcoverings professionally, with our Quilt Finishing Techniques session on December 1, 7 to 10 p.m.

Watch for further details on our Fabulous Furs Orientation on December 2, 7 to 9 p.m.

For more information on any of the above courses, call Verona Lea at 724-4101 or 724-2269.

Alberta author to visit schools

Alberta author Mary Woodbury will be visiting schools in Elk Point, St. Paul and other northeast Alberta communities next week as part of the Young Alberta Book Festival and Canadian Children's Book Festival celebrations.

The readings were arranged by the Northern Lights Library System, and will take place on Thursday, November 5, with Ms Woodbury reading to Grades 4 and 5 at St. Paul Elementary Community School that morning, and to Grades 7 to 9 at F.G. Miller High School, Elk Point, during the afternoon.

Mary Woodbury is an Edmonton freelance writer, whose works include children's literature, short stories and fiction. Her work has been published in various magazines and anthologies and has been performed at Womanstrength, the Celebration of Women in the Arts. As well, she has published a collection of short fiction for adults, and has taught creative writing skills to young people.

Ms Woodbury has won the Children's Book Centre "Our Choice" award for Letting Go, a novel for preteens and younger teenagers about a young lady who finds difficulty in saying goodbye to the people and places she has always known. A second novel for young people is Where In The World Is Jenny Parker? in which eleven year old Jenny finds thrills, troubles and terrorists in the exciting city of Rome.

Strong, Stable Families & Communities
Yes, It Is Possible!

Applying holistic management can:

- Offer families an opportunity to stay on the land and achieve a high quality of life.
- Restore profitability to farming, ranching, and other management enterprises.
- Increase stocking rates on ranches.
- Reduce the risks of weather, market shifts, and other disasters.
- Improve wildlife habitat and diversity.
- Reverse the desertification of rangelands, farms, lakes, rivers, and forests
- Resolve long-standing conflicts over the use and management of our resources.

Come and listen to an overview. There are alternatives to managing our resources and achieving our goals. Please bring your spouse, family member, farm partner or friend. Everyone will benefit! If sufficient interest, courses will be scheduled later.

SAFETY TIPS

Halloween

SPONSORED BY

Because We Care

- 1) Fire proof costumes only should be worn
- 2) Walk, don't run trick or treating
- 3) Have your parents inspect all treats before eating
- 4) Stay on sidewalks
- 5) Cross only at corners
- 6) Make sure masks don't impair vision
- 7) Costumes should be visible to motorists
- 8) Use reflective tap
- 9) Light your jack-o-lantern with flashlight, which is safer than candles
- 10) Sharp or pointed weapons are unsafe

- 11) Visit only well-lit familiar homes
- 12) Do not run out between cars
- 13) Accept treats only at the front door
- 14) Do not trick or treat alone
- 15) Use Halloween make-up rather than ill-fitting masks.
- 16) All trick or treating should be done while it's still light out
- 17) Discard any unwrapped candy
- 18) Look both ways before crossing the street
- 19) Children under 10 should always be accompanied by an adult
- 20) Always be polite.
